

Developing the Climate Justice and Resilience Toolkit with and for Community Service Organisations

The Climate Justice and Resilience Toolkit will be an open source that provides information, tools, and guides for Community Service Organisations to integrate a Climate Justice and Resilience Lense into their work, programs and practices.

An Aboriginal Governance Group governs the Toolkit development and a Lived Experience Advisory Group, a Stakeholder Committee that includes representatives from several Community Service Organisations, and an Academic Team at Edith Cowan University are part of the project team.

Climate Justice sits at the intersection of Social Justice and Climate.

It seeks to put equity, human rights, and participation at the core of climate readiness, action, and decision-making to ensure that no one is left behind.

The Climate Justice Toolkit will include resources such as Climate Anxiety, Climate and Health, Reducing Organisational Footprint, Advocacy and Partnerships, Divestment, Disaster Readiness, Financial Counselling after Disaster, Food Sovereignty, working with People with Lived Experiences and much more.

Some of the Climate Justice Tools and Resources will be co-created in workshops with the contribution of a diversity of people and perspectives.

We would like to invite you to stay informed about the toolkit, share our newsletter with your network and join some of the upcoming co-creation workshops.

To find out more, please visit our newsletters and register to receive the updates:

#1 Climate Justice & Community Services Network Updates

#2 Climate Justice & Community Services Network Updates

#3 Climate Justice & Community Services Network Updates

We will host our initial
Co-Creation workshop on PRINCIPLES for the Climate Justice and Resilience Toolkit on Thursday, the 21st of March (online).
If you are interested in joining us please contact
Raphaela Raaber s.raaber@ecu.edu.au

