RACISM LITERACY IN SECONDARY EDUCATION STUDY

EDITH COWAN UNIVERSITY | MURDOCH UNIVERSITY | CURTIN UNIVERSITY

Are you a parent or carer of an Aboriginal or Culturally and Linguistically Diverse high school student and want to share your experiences with racism at school?

We want to learn about racism in WA high schools, and we'd like to hear from you! Edith Cowan University, Murdoch University, and Curtin University are working together on a project called Racism Literacy in Secondary Education (RLISE). They want to understand what students and families are going through. This study is being led by Aboriginal and culturally diverse researchers.

What will happen?

Join a small group chat (focus group or yarning circle) to talk about what you and your child have been through with racism in high school.

Your story is important.

By sharing your experience, you can help make WA high schools safer and kinder. You'll get a $70 voucher to say thank you. What you tell us will stay private and no one will know it's from you.
