DEATH DOULA TRAINING

INDIGENOUS SCHOLARSHIP APPLICATION

The Grief Centre of Western Australia is excited to offer four Scholarships for Aboriginal people to attend Death Doula Training with Denise Love on July 20/21, 2019. Denise has worked extensively over three decades in Australia and with Indigenous communities across Asia to bring more skills, compassion and informed decision making to the important moments of birth and death. Denise's unique style, warmth and storytelling makes learning around death and dying an inspiration.

Death Doula Training with Denise is an ideal professional development opportunity for health professionals and for anyone interested in assisting family, friends and community members during end-of-life. Denise's workshops fill fast and spaces are limited. For further information please see: <https://www.deniselove.net/about2>

To be considered for a Scholarship please answer the following questions (1pg max.);

- Why are you inspired to attend Death Doula Training?
- How will the training assist you in your current role/s, or with your aspirations for the future?
- What aspects would you like to see improved for your community around the end-of-life, funeral and grief period?

The Grief Centre of Western Australia offers understanding, support and recovery pathways for people living with debilitating grief. The Centre is aware of the impact of intergenerational grief within Aboriginal communities and is keen to collaborate to establish pathways that ensure Indigenous people across WA are empowered to offer their communities new understandings, support and guidance throughout the end-of-life care, funeral and grief journey. At the Grief Centre we believe well-informed and well-supported end-of-life decisions can minimise the length and depth of the grief journey.
