

Radical Centre Reform Lab: Internship Opportunity!

Indigenous Constitutional Recognition: Next Steps to a First Nations Constitutional Voice

RCRL Intern Action Hub

- Are you an undergraduate/postgraduate student or early career professional who is passionate about Indigenous rights, constitutional reform, and reconciliation in Australia?
- Do you want to contribute to real reform, as envisioned by the Uluru Statement from the Heart?
- Do you want to learn advocacy and research skills, while working within a diverse Action Hub to brainstorm and execute strategies to help achieve practical change?
- Do you aspire to lead, advocate and build community support for reform?

With generous support from Foundation Donors, Henry and Marcia Pinski, and in partnership with Cape York Institute, Macquarie University Law School's new Radical Centre Reform Lab is offering 5 intern positions within the RCRL Intern Action Hub for talented and committed Australians who want to be part of this push for change.

The 2022 interns will be supervised by constitutional lawyer and reform advocate, Dr Shireen Morris, and will:

- Work flexibly with a diverse team on research, brainstorming and executing strategies in support of the Uluru Statement
- Organise and participate in awareness-raising events
- Network and collaborate with other advocates, Indigenous leaders and experts across Australia.

Time commitment:

- Flexible, but interns should commit to contributing at least 5 hours a week to this work.
- Interns will convene once a fortnight, at a time to be determined at the convenience of members.
- Interns can participate remotely.

Stipend: An annual stipend of $2000.

Email shireen.morris@mq.edu.au with your CV (including 2 referees) and a letter detailing:

- Why you want to be part of this project?
- What skills, experience and networks you can bring to help further this cause?
- How you think you can contribute to this project in a unique way?

Indigenous and Non-Indigenous advocates are encouraged to apply – we seek a diverse, multicultural membership of the RCRL Intern Action Hub!

Application Deadline: 7th January 2022
